Judge Rules In Favor of Orland In Fire Truck Case

The suit of the Village of Orland Park against former fire chief John Helenhouse which has attracted wide attention and which has been the subject of a number of court hearings, came to a final conclusion Tuesday afternoon of this week when Judge John Prystalski in the Circuit Court of Cook County, handed down a decision after the two factions involved in the controversy could not effect a settlement among themselves.

The Judge ruled that the fire truck and the title thereof goes to the Village board as village property and that all moneys contributed by the farmers of the Orland Park territory toward the purchase fund of the truck in question is not returnable to the farmers but is considered as a contribution to the village. The Judge further ruled that all moneys raised by the old fire department through their efforts in conducting picnics and dances and which was used to help pay on the fire truck shall be paid back by the village board to the old fire department.

Under the ruling, Geo. Steinhagen who was appointed fire chief last February retains this office and all the members of the new fire department now take over the department. The old fire department headed by John Helenhouse and its members are now no longer connected with the village in any way. The old department and its former chief was given 20 days within which to appeal the case if he should so desire.

Monday evening a group of farmers held a meeting at the Orland Park village hall to consider a proposition as to what action they could take in the fire truck question in as much as they had made contributions for the purchase of this fire fighting equipment. John Kline acted as spokesman and advised the farmers that if they did take over the fire department and not carrying any insurance against accidents, they would all automatically become liable in case of any accident. The Village Board made the proposition that both fire department members get together form one department and hold an election as to their choice for fire chief and whoever was elected would be agreeable to the village board. This offer was refused so the only alternative remaining was for the Judge to decide the case.

This case has been before the public since last fall and finally came to a head early this spring when Mayor W. R. Schussler Jr. acting for the Village board, started suit against former fire chief Helenhouse for the purpose of having the fire fighting equipment turned over to the jurisdiction of the board. Quite a few hundred dollars will be paid back to the old fire department to reimburse them for whatever they paid in on the purchase of the new fire truck. This closes a case which has made local history.

MOKENA BOARD TO RECEIVE BIDS ON STREET WORK

Next Thursday night the Mokena Village board will hold a special meeting to receive and open bids for the local street improvement work to be done this summer with the gas tax funds due the village from the state. With less automobiles being operated and less consumption of gas the gas tax revenue will be greatly curtailed.

To Hold Meeting Next Tuesday to Consider $4200 Project

For many years about 5 acres of the Fred Yunker farm on the south edge of the village of Mokena has been rendered almost worthless for farm land due to being continually flooded following a heavy rain.

Storm waters from the village of Mokena as well as adjoining farms have aided much in flooding this low portion of the farm. A matter of draining this land has been considered at various times and although there are a string of tiles running thru this portion of the farm, and there is an open ditch, yet the drainage is not sufficient to carry the water off in times of heavy rains.

Tuesday evening at a special board meeting of the village board Mr. Yunker appeared with Messrs. Parish and Sullivan of the Saint Anne Farm Drainage Sales of St. Anne, Ill., who submitted a plan whereby this farm land might be drained and also the storm water from the village can be carried off.

Their proposition was to lay a string of tile from 14 to 16 inches in diameter with the outlet at Hickory Creek southwest of Mokena.

The cost of the proposed project would be approximately $4200 and the money would be raised by asking the various property owners who would be benefited by this new drainage tile for a certain percentage according to their benefits.

The parties who would be benefited and who have been invited to a public meeting at the Mokena Village hall next Tuesday evening at 7:30 o'clock are: Cappel Bros., Elizabeth Cappel Est., Mrs. Henry Stellwagon, Fred Yunker, Robt Gaddis, Albert Hentsch Geo. Warning, Fred Robinson, Highway Commissioner Geo Knudson of Frankfort township, Elmer Sippel, Mokena Wall Paper Mill and Village of Mokena.

CLARIFYING SUGAR QUESTION

A direct clarification from Washington, corrects a confused situation on the possible supply of sugar for functions conducted by church, lodge and PTA groups. Through a mistaken interpretation, special allowances of sugar were granted and some groups were registered as institutions. A telegram has been issued which permits such groups to be listed as institutions, only if they regularly serve not less than four meals a week for which a charge is made.

All others must depend on contributions of sugar from their members. All such registrations must now be cancelled.

Canal Zone Ready for All Comers

Panama Jungles Now a Huge Armed Camp.

By CHARLES A. SINGLER
Released by Western Newspaper Union.

OUR canal zone is one of the hottest spots in the Western hemisphere, both meteorologically and strategically, and is becoming increasingly "hotter" as the war wears on and the possibilities of an enemy thrust by land or sea, or by both, become more imminent.

The Panama Canal is not only our proudest national possession, but a vital link in the U. S. chain of defense fortifications. Little wonder, then, that the eyes of Europe, Asia and all America are turned towards this narrow but important waterway which military forethought and engineering skill provided for our nation some twenty-seven years ago.

The Canal Zone is 50 miles long and about 10 miles wide. Approximately 95 square miles of this is under water. The canal itself is about 34 miles in length and 87 feet high. Deep jungle growths crowd densely upon all sides, furnishing ideal concealment for gun emplacements.

All Is 'On the Alert.'

In these lush, steaming jungles where there seems to be no life except that of the countless strange birds and jungle animals that live by the code of tooth and claw, there are many eyes watching; all on the alert. Here brave U. S. boys are waiting for the planes to come, and somehow or other hoping that maybe they will, to relieve the deadly monotony of life in the deep jungle. Here under the concealing drapery of leaves and branches great naval rifles point forever out to sea with their silent threat to all who may come that way, unbidden. These great 16-inch coastal defense rifles out-range the guns of most battleships. Practice is constantly going on, mostly with the use of dud loads, for Uncle Sam cannot afford to waste costly ammunition or the precious rifling of these big guns on a harmless sea.

And here under the same friendly foliage, "ack-ack" guns bristle towards the sky, a hidden challenge to any air armada or lone enemy bomber which may be rash enough to venture near the canal. Jungle foliage also conceals cool hideouts for gunners—caves in which long gleaming rows of shells, some of them inscribed with loving names for the enemy, await the day or night when the call for action comes. In these caves the "day" is 24 hours long. During all this time gun crews stand on the alert, ready to pour a hot welcome into the sullen jungle skies. During the "off" periods the men repair to more comfortable barracks, completely camouflaged, to gain the needed exercise and recreation.

Underground Cities.

In the Panama Canal Zone are also secret island fortresses where underground cities, carved from sheer rock, offer a threat to the would-be invader. Switchboards have been installed, and when the time comes, if it should, tons of red hot trouble will pour from these fortresses to make the invader wish he had stayed closer to home.

Not only does the jungle shroud great naval and anti-aircraft guns, ready for instant action, but also hidden airdromes, full of planes poised for flight, ready to do their bit for

For Protection of Panama Canal

Dr. Octavio Fabrega, foreign minister of the Republic of Panama, pictured (right) as he signed the agreement whereby Panama agreed to establishment of bases within the republic, for the protection of the canal by the United States. At left is Edwin C. Wilson, ambassador to Panama. The agreement, which was signed May 18, 1942, involves the use of some 40,000 acres in the republic by the U. S. armed forces.

Uncle Sam. It conceals keen-eyed watchers on the alert for surprise attacks and treachery. Pearl Harbor has not been forgotten.

Great forts stand at either ocean entrance to the canal, and swift naval vessels are constantly on guard. P-T boats, those swift messengers of death which accounted for more than one Jap warship in Manila bay and which got General MacArthur out of Bataan, are ready to lend their speed and their fighting power to the defense of the waterway. These deadly "mosquito boats," as they are called, carry an anti-aircraft gun that hurls a 20 mm. explosive shell which is bad medicine for attacking planes. P-Ts can also raise havoc amidst surface craft with their deadly torpedoes and blast a sub from the deep with depth charges.

Where 'Walls Have Ears.'

Unseen sentinels move about through the Panama jungle, as ubiquitous as all outdoors, popping up when least expected. No action escapes unseen; no spoken word is unheard. Here is a place where, indeed, "the walls have ears." Landmine units are on the qui vive, waiting to do their share in rendering enemy progress dangerous and slow.

Packed away in the jungle, too, there is infantry—the inevitable infantry—to which we must all pin our hopes to push the enemy back if he should succeed in gaining a foothold in this vital area. With the advent of the new trans-Isthmian highway the speedy movement of troops from one end of the canal to the other—a 48-mile run—is an accomplished fact.

Dangers Facing Us.

These are some of the things that are awaiting those who have lost their respect for territorial rights.

And now, having had a glimpse of the canal's defenses, let us consider briefly from which direction and in what form any thrust at the canal may come.

As the most strategic spot in our hemisphere, and offering an opportunity of bottling up our fleet in either ocean, it can safely be assumed that our enemies will want to smash the canal at the earliest possible date, regardless of all hazards, and will leave nothing undone to attain this objective. Their plans might take shape in the form of small raiding parties or in vast armadas of bombers and fighter planes.

Then, too, we are faced with the menace of secret bases. We must not forget the lesson of the Jap-mandated Marshall islands on which secret bases were built in open defiance of international treaties. The uninhabited jungles of nearby Central and South America might provide aerial hideouts for the treacherous Japs or the deceitful and ever-diligent Nazis.

With Franco "playing ball" continually with Adolf Hitler, islands such as the Spanish Canaries and the Portuguese Azores, or the many small isles that dot the Caribbean, might furnish springboards for hostile wings.

Danger From the Sea.

Airplane carriers, steaming ahead at full speed all night, or for several nights, as in the case of the sneak attack on Pearl Harbor, offer serious potential dangers. Once within 500 miles of the Canal Zone they could launch their planes in the gray of the dawn. They know full well that just one big "egg" dropped in a lock, would hatch loads of trouble for Uncle Sam. We must bear in mind that without the canal in operation a 50-mile trip becomes a 13,000-mile cruise "around the Horn," either way you take it, with its terrific loss of precious time and greatly increased operating costs.

The battleship Oregon made one such emergency trip during the Spanish-American war, and arrived on the scene in time to turn the tide of battle, but we have neither the time nor the inclination for this sort of thing in this war with the Axis. Nothing must happen to the Panama canal!

Friendly but Questionable Isles.

Let us look in another direction. One thousand miles to the southwest of the Canal Zone loom the shadowy shapes of the Galapagos islands. These islands are owned by friendly Ecuador. These tiny islands, though in friendly hands, are anybody's guess these days, for Jap "fishing boats" have been known to have plied off their shores, and who knows what observations have been made and what soundings taken.

Then there is the menace of the nearby blue Caribbean, in which enemy subs are known to be prowling, and which have already taken heavy toll of our merchant shipping in these very waters, so dangerously close to the canal. Dealing with this menace is the Caribbean patrol of huge navy patrol bombers, 15-ton Consolidated flying boats with sound apparatus to detect subs, and two tons of bombs. These bombers roar out daily on dawn-to-dusk sweeps of the Caribbean and the Atlantic, and may be included as an important arm of the canal defense.

Espionage and sabotage, the long suit of the enemy, may also be listed on the debit side of the ledger in an accounting of the Canal Zone's danger potentials, and all must be dealt with in their own individual way.

An Historic Event.

The most important event in the history of the canal occurred in January, 1939, when the U. S. fleet passed from the Pacific to the Atlantic ocean, and even more dramatic was the return passage of a large portion of the fleet in early May of that year. Both transits were made without the appearance of haste, but in record time.

Contrary to the general belief, the canal does not run due east and west, but zig-zags irregularly across the isthmus. Its operation consists in helping ships, however big and bulky, to ascend three water-steps (locks) from one ocean into the huge man-made Lake Gatun, from which they descend three other water-steps into the ocean at the canal's other end. The locks are so constructed that two vessels proceeding in opposite directions may go through the canal at the same time. Big ships occupy a whole lock, and smaller ships are wedged in like sardines. Once in the locks the ship's crew is shoved aside and the canal crew takes over.

The United States has sovereignty over the entire Canal Zone. Two cities stand guard at either gateway of the canal—Balboa at the Atlantic end and Panama at the Pacific end.

The canal was constructed during Theodore Roosevelt's administration by the U. S. army, with General Goethals as engineering chief and General Gorges in charge of public health. It was opened to commercial traffic August 15, 1915, and was declared formally completed July 12, 1920, during President Wilson's administration.

Boost Sub Destroyer Output Rather Than Merchant Ships . . .
United Allies Staging War of Nerves . . .

Beil Syndicate—WNU Features.

WASHINGTON.—While the decision has not been made, it is highly unlikely that President Roosevelt will revise upward his demands of construction of merchant ships.

The classifications, using precious steel which will be raised, are aimed at destroying submarines rather than replacing losses from submarines.

It will be noted that most of the ships sent to the bottom by submarines have not been in convoys—nor in the patrolled lanes. That is one reason for the gasoline shortage in the Eastern states. Obviously there have been no convoys of tankers bringing oil from the Gulf ports to the East.

The only important protection afforded along that long coastwise route has been by airplane spotting. It is true that this has resulted in the sinking of some undersea boats, but it has not proved very sound insurance for the tankers.

In contrast, the supply ships transporting our men and supplies to the various theaters of war, from the Arctic coast of Russia to Australia and all way stations, have suffered hardly at all.

This is the logic behind the President's present thought that it is better, for the time being, to put any surplus steel that may be available over and above the objectives already laid down into destroyers, torpedo boats, corvettes, etc., rather than into merchant ships.

One for One

One destroyer, corvette or torpedo boat may destroy a submarine which otherwise might sink a dozen merchant ships. Of the three types none uses more steel than a single merchant ship; the corvette uses considerably less, and the torpedo boat very little indeed.

There is another argument for building more submarine destroyers rather than U-boat fodder. This is that when a merchant ship is sent to the bottom there is frequently a loss of life. Nothing comparable to when a ship is lost in a naval engagement, for as a result of present war conditions frequently the majority of a crew of a warship is lost.

But too many trained seamen in the merchant service are being killed. And they are very difficult to replace. So it is quite conceivable that one corvette or destroyer might save the lives of a considerable number of merchant seamen, as well as merchant ships.

Allies Permit News 'Leaks' To Create Confusion

During the period known as the "phony war," before Germany overran the Low Countries and Norway, and short-circuited the Maginot line, Hitler was doing to the French and British what Roosevelt and Churchill are now trying to do to Hitler.

No one knew, then, what Hitler was going to do. So Hitler utilized the time by finding out precisely what the French and British—not to mention the Belgians and Dutch, would do in every possible contingency.

Over the many months of the "phony war" Hitler thus acquired a vast amount of information as to just what to expect when "Der Tag" came.

As a matter of fact their peoples, those in Belgium and Holland, were very much divided. Many of them thought they would be able to maintain their neutrality throughout the war. It is of record that Hitler sold guns to the Dutch for gold, and then captured the guns later on.

Naturally the parallel is not exact. There is no maneuvering of an invasion force up and down a frontier, while the helpless victims on the other side, hoping to maintain peace, scramble for a defensive distribution of their forces. But the effect is very similar, from a military standpoint.

News is allowed to leak out—in fact it is broadcast—that a "very large" American expeditionary force has landed in Northern Ireland. A few days later it is announced officially that another large Canadian force has landed in Britain.

We do not know precisely how large this United States force now in the British Isles (counting Ulster as part of that category) may be. We only know it is sizable.

It is assumed by officials here that Berlin knows precisely how many United States troops are waiting there for the "second front," and what their equipment and training is. It is also assumed that Berlin knows how many Canadian troops are in Britain, and how many British troops are available.

What Berlin does not know is where this force is going to strike, or when. It might be anywhere from the North Cape, or beyond, to Murmansk, down to Italy.

Woman, Adrift 105 Days in Lifeboat, Tells of Voyage

Suffers Mental Blackout as Result of Trials of Fatal Trip.

LOS ANGELES.—Mrs. Lily Fern Thompson, 22-year-old survivor of 105 tragic days on a sloop-rigged lifeboat in the Pacific, has recovered sufficiently to recall briefly incidents of the fatal trip.

Attorney Robert A. Neeb Jr. said he expects to show the young widow the log of the Wing On this weekend. The boat disintegrated a few hours after she was removed from it by a missionary in the Fiji islands November 24, 1940.

Mrs. Thompson, still barely alive, was brought home March 24, 1941. She was suffering from a mental blackout; was too weak to walk; was a bundle of nerves despite three months' hospitalization in Suva; there was a question whether she ever would see again.

In those 13 months, Neeb said, Mrs. Thompson has recovered sufficiently to take daily walks, enjoy automobile rides and picture shows, and, more remarkable, "to tell a good deal of what happened. She recalls the deaths of her husband and the others—Dave and Eve Conly," the other young couple who set out so gaily August 12, 1940, on a pleasure cruise to the South Seas.

Husband Buried at Sea.

The party had rigged up a 28-foot lifeboat and took provisions for only one month. They expected to sail to Hawaii and then Samoa, but missed both. Thompson and the Conlys, from Oakland, Calif., never sighted land after they left San Pedro, Calif.—they died of starvation. Clint Thompson was the first to die, because he refused to eat so that the others might have the few scraps remaining.

Thompson, 21, was buried at sea. Mrs. Conly's body was buried in the Fijis. Conly's was lost as the boat fell to pieces overnight after the Rev. W. G. Ferris, a missionary at Cuba Bay, Vanna Lavu, Fiji islands, removed Mrs. Thompson.

Neeb said Mrs. Thompson's one wish is to live a normal life with her two children. Tommy, 27 months old, lives with her at her parents' home. Her daughter, Jackie, lives a few blocks away, with her paternal grandparents, but Mrs. Thompson sees her daily.

On the advice of a psychiatrist, Mrs. Thompson was given bit by bit scraps of information obtained from the log of the Wing On. Finally she began to recall incidents from her tragic trip.

Memory Returns.

She was not told of her husband's death; nor of the Conlys', but eventually she remembered.

Nor was she shown any newspaper clippings. Nor any correspondence, such as this excerpt from Mr. Ferris' letter:

"She (Mrs. Thompson) has lived, indeed, in the reek of death for these weeks . . ."

"She now has a complete grasp of the entire voyage," Neeb said, "but we hope to correlate various details by showing her, one by one, articles from the Wing On."

Colonel, Shaving, Just Buddy to Lost Non-Com

HATTIESBURG, MISS.—A sergeant in a field maneuvers group was looking for his unit when he spied a soldier, shirtless, shaving himself before a mirror fastened to a truck body.

"Hey, Bud," said the sergeant, tapping the soldier on the back, "can you tell me where Company A is located?"

When the shaver whirled around the sergeant turned as white as the lather on the other's face.

"Where the hell," asked Shirtless—and the words bit, "did you learn to call a colonel bud?"

The sergeant had slapped the back of his executive officer.

Shell Game Winner Is Loser to Florida Jurors

SARASOTA, FLA.—The defendant pleaded innocent to charges of operating a "shell game" and acted as his own counsel.

"Do you know how to work this game?" asked County Judge Forrest Chapman.

"Yes, sir; not very well, but I can," replied the defendant.

He shuffled the shells, asked the judge and jury to pick the one with the ball under it.

The judge drew an empty. The jury agreed on a second. The ball wasn't there either.

The defendant turned up the third and there it was. The jury turned in a conviction.

This Honest Panhandler Helps Out His Friend

KANSAS CITY.—Martin Jones' panhandler won't let his friends down. No, sir! Mr. Jones encounters the mendicant daily near his office and never turns down a plea.

Yesterday Mr. Jones reversed the procedure. Without hesitation, the man pulled out his small stock of cash and handed over five cents.

The amazed Mr. Jones, conscience stricken, chased his benefactor half a block to return the handout.

Prisoner Is Missing; Turns Out It's Mascot

RALEIGH, N. C.—Prison clerk searched in vain for the fingerprints and record of Jiggs Thebear, listed as one of the 150 prisoners transferred from the Perquimans county camp to Caledonia prison farm. They discovered that the prisoner was really Jiggs, the bear, a pet of the Perquimans men.

Million in Gems Found on Beach

Fell From Wrecked Plane
Off Australian Coast.

MELBOURNE. — A $1,000,000 packet of diamonds, lost when a plane flying from Java was shot down by the Japanese off the Australian coast was found by an unidentified beachcomber after official searches failed, it was announced here.

The diamonds were turned over to authorities at a northwestern town. The beachcomber, who walked into the town to enlist in the Australian Imperial forces, said he found the parcel while searching the beach for sea food.

Destined for the Commonwealth Bank of Australia, the parcel had been handed to the pilot of one of the last planes to take off from Java after the Japanese had landed on the island early in March. As it neared the Australian coast, the plane was attacked and shot down by Japanese aircraft.

The pilot made a crash landing near the beach, but the plane was wrecked and partly submerged. Four members of the crew were killed.

Forced to wait for many days before wandering natives rescued them, the survivors searched among the plane's wreckage, but couldn't find the precious cargo. Later, an official party returned to the scene, but its search, too, was fruitless.

The beachcomber, whose reward has not yet been determined, said he found the parcel partially buried in a mud bank.

High School Boy Keeps Bees in His Bedroom

CLEVELAND.—Tom Paisley, a 15-year-old high school sophomore of suburban Shaker Heights, keeps thousands of bees in his bedroom.

The bees, in fact, have their own private entrance to his bedroom.

Through a hole in the bedroom window frame the bees enter a small passageway that leads to their glass-enclosed hive.

Young Paisley became interested in bee supply several years ago, and took a correspondence course in bee culture, which is conducted by Ohio State university. He has eight hives on his family's farm in Mentor, Ohio, but maintains his bedroom apiary as well.

To Rattle a Rattler:

Just Rhumba on His Roof

PIERRE, S. D.—Want to give a rattlesnake the jitters? Jump up and down on the ground near him. It scares him half to death.

A. M. Jackley, South Dakota snake exterminator, reported that a hay crew found two rattlesnakes in a window, killed them, and on returning for the next load found more snakes.

The more snakes they killed, the more appeared. Jackley said the vibrations of the truck drove the snakes from mouse and gopher burrows. The men tallied up 77 snakes from the five acres.

Car Wrecked Twice and Stolen All in One Day

JACKSONVILLE, FLA.—R. M. Aiken, employee of the Jacksonville naval air station, thought it was bad enough when another machine clipped his front fender, but his troubles had only begun.

A policeman ordered both cars moved a short distance away while a conference was called to agree on damages. When Aiken returned for his car it was gone, but it turned up when officers went to another accident in which the stolen car had piled into a light pole. The car was wrecked twice and stolen once in the same day.

Catching Tire Thieves

Easy for Old Cowhand

GRAND PRAIRIE, TEXAS.—Catching tire thieves is a cinch out here in the cow country—you don't even have to chase 'em. Aroused by a noise in his garage, C. F. Witherspoon grabbed his lasso, made a throw and caught the intruder the first try. All Witherspoon had to do was haul in the thief and call the town marshal.

Talkative Thief Meets

An Obliging Customer

PHOENIX, ARIZ.—Jess W. Spain didn't find many sympathetic police ears when he gave details of his $171 robbery.

"I woke up and found a man sitting on my bed," related Spain. "We talked a little while, then I turned over and went to sleep. In the morning I found my billfold gone."

Small Boats to Dodge Subs by Intracoastal Route

Repeated suggestions that the gasoline shortage in the eastern seaboard states might be partly met by use of barges in the Intracoastal Waterway have brought this sheltered route into the news, especially so since the submarine menace. Intra-coastal Waterway is a 3,500-mile route, mostly land-protected, from Boston along the Atlantic and Gulf coasts to the Rio Grande.

From Boston to New York the depth of the waterway is ample, but shelter from sea attack is limited to that provided by Cape Cod and Long Island, says the National Geographic society. From New York to Norfolk the route that will eventually take shape is by a wide, deep trans-Jersey canal from Sayreville on the Raritan to Bordentown on the Delaware, then through the industry-lined channel of the Delaware's upper tidewater to the Chesapeake and Delaware canal and into the Chesapeake bay.

GHOST PLANE

By ARTHUR STRINGER W.N.U. SERVICE

THE STORY SO FAR: To help his partner, Cruger, keep Norland Airways in business, Alan Slade agrees to fly a "scientist" named Frayne and his assistant, Karnell, to the Anawotto river in search of the trumpeter swan. With the proceeds Cruger has bought a new plane, a Lockheed, which is stolen while Slade is away. The plane must be found, or Norland Airways is through. When he returns Slade starts out again, with only two meager clues, to recover the plane. The first clue is the "devil bird" the eskimo, Umanak, believes comes from Echo Harbor. The second is Slade's hunch that the lost plane and the swan-hunter, Frayne, are somehow connected. He flies back to where he left Frayne, only to find that Frayne is apparently just hunting swans. There is no sign of the lost plane.

Now continue with the story.

CHAPTER X

He would be glad, he knew, to hear the roar of that engine again. He even quickened his pace as he recognized the cove where his ship was anchored.

Then his gladness vanished and a tingle of apprehension went through his body. For as he glanced down at the waterfront he saw that his mooring lines had been cast off and his plane was adrift. He could see it moving in the freshening breeze, circling slowly about until the pontoons grounded on a gravel-bar.

His response to that discovery was both immediate and unreasoned. He went sliding down the ridge side and splashing through the shallows as he rounded the cove end. The intruder aboard the plane must have seen him as he went.

Slade could make out a wide-shouldered figure clambering down to a float, a figure that hesitated for only a moment and then leaped into the shallow water and waded ashore. Once ashore he slipped away into the spruce slopes and was lost to sight.

Slade's first impulse was to race after him. But the most important thing, he remembered, was his plane. He went splashing out and climbed aboard. There his quick eye inventoried his instrument board, assessed engine and controls, and discovered no damage to his ship. His smile was grim as he replaced the breaker assembly which was essential to the life of his motor. Its absence, he suspected, had kept that wide-shouldered intruder from taking off and disappearing into the unknown. And that wide-shouldered skulker, he had every reason to believe, was Frayne's man Karnell.

Indignation was still burning through Slade's body as he gunned the motor and rose into the air. He circled twice over the lakeside spruce slopes, searching without reward for any sign of life there. Then he veered back and circled twice over the island-studded water where he knew Frayne's observation post to be. But the only sign of life he caught from that quarter was the sudden wing-flutter of a huge male-trumpeter, who interrupted his watchful driftings to lift his long neck and fling a cry of defiance up at the cloud-cleaving wings of his rival. Slade caught the sound of that trumpeted challenge, even through his engine roar, as he turned south and headed for the camp at the mouth of the Kasakana.

Slade had the feeling of being in more friendly territory when he saw Lake Avikaka once more under his floats. But no welcoming figures emerged from the shack as he circled over it in the evening light. No kindly old voice called out to him as he moored beside the landing stage.

That left him both puzzled and depressed, until his ear caught the sound of a distant detonation. He knew well enough the meaning of that blast. It meant that Zeke and Minty had foregone their usual supper hour to keep on with their mine work, delving like badgers along some new drift or pounding rock at the bottom of some new test pit.

Slade, standing back between the shadowy ore piles, could see Zeke crimp a mercury cap with his teeth and stick it into a dynamite cartridge before disappearing in the pit mouth. It was that old sordidness of fixed rule, he remembered, never to use powder until down to hard rock. Their methods may have been those of a passing generation, but they had found something worth while. For after a second detonation and a second scrambling down the pit mouth Slade could hear Minty's cackle of triumph as he inspected a fragment of blue quartz which Zeke's tremulous fingers held just under his nose.

"She's rich, all right," cried Minty. "You can see her with the naked eye."

"She's the best yet," Zeke agreed as he continued to squint at the ragged quartz slab. "And now we know she's there, you old thimble-ribber, it's about time to call it a day."

It was then that Slade called out to them. That call, through the long-houred evening light, caused Minty to wheel about with a startled grunt at the same moment that Zeke's long arm swung out to catch up a rifle that had rested unseen against the windlass frame.

"Put it down, you old quartz-chipper; put it down," was Slade's cry as he advanced toward them.

The two taut figures relaxed. The

A figure that hesitated for only a moment and then leaped into the shallow water.

hostility went out of their faces. But Zeke's eyes remained troubled. "You mustn't do things like that, Lindy. I might've given you a air hole through the esophagus."

"I'd rather you gave me a meal," said the new-comer, as they shook hands and headed toward the shack. "You're too old to keep to a sixteen-hour day like this."

Minty pointed an accusatory finger at the flyer.

"So you're givin' us the go-by these days?" he questioned.

"What does that mean?" asked Slade as they trudged backward.

"Weren't you in this neighborhood two nights ago?"

Slade stopped in his tracks.

"Why do you ask that?"

"Cause I heard you when you came down to pick up them gas drums. And I heard you the day before, over the hills," Minty asserted.

"Wait a minute," cried Slade. "You don't mean my gas is gone?"

"You know it's gone, you night-prowlin' puddle-jumper. But why in heck did you tote off them two dozen old ore bags?"

Slade studied the two old faces so wrinkled with concern.

"You say you heard a plane?" he questioned.

"We sure did," said Minty. "And heard it more 'n once. What's more, I seen it."

"This," said Slade, "is going to need a little looking into."

Zeke agreed with him.

"We don't want no strangers snoopin' round this territory," he proclaimed.

"How about that nincompoop in specks who's nosin' out swans' nests?" questioned Minty. "He's the only outsider within a crow flight o' this camp."

"But he has no plane," said Slade. "And no need for one."

"Well, he'd better keep clear o' this claim," croaked the embattled Minty.

"But two can play at that game, Minty," Slade pointed out. "And there's something going on between here and Echo Harbor that needs a bit of looking into."

"I seen a plane all right," maintained the scowling Minty. "But I can't figger out why he'd be flyin' across empty country."

"Or what in heck he'd swipe two dozen ore bags for," added Zeke.

Minty's apprehensive eye rested on the young flyer.

"Looks to me, son, as though you was the bird to do some needed scoutin' round here. That Snow-Ball Baby o' yours could cover the whole Barrens while Minty and me was footin' it through fifteen miles o' muskeg."

"You're right, Zeke," Slade acknowledged. "And after I swing south tomorrow I'm coming back to do a little investigating along the Anawotto."

Slade, hightailing it for his home port on the Snye, headed southward with a sense of something unfinished, a contradiction unreconciled, a problem unsolved. His first move, after landing and having a few hurried words with the redoubtable Cassidy, was to hurry over to Cruger and his plain-boarded administration building.

"What held you up?" was that official's curt demand.

"Stolen gas," said Slade. "There's somebody robbing our emergency caches."

Cruger, at that announcement, wheeled about on him.

"At what stations?"

"At Wolf Lake. And later at Avikaka."

The pilot could see his chief's mouth harden with exasperation.

"So we're getting it from all sides!" exclaimed Cruger. "You know, of course, we haven't spotted a trace of that lost Lockheed?"

Slade nodded.

"I talked with Cassidy, down at the dock. I'd a question or two I wanted to ask him. It didn't help much."

"Nothing from Cassidy has helped much," said his partner. "But a plane can't be carried off like a snatched pocketbook. It can't be hidden away and it can't be sold and it can't be passed on to others."

"Then what's the answer?" asked Slade.

"That's something still ahead of us," said Cruger. "Every ship in this Dominion has to pass governmental inspection and carry a license. It can't make a move without being checked and counter-checked. It couldn't land across the Line without customs permits and it couldn't stay there without being reported."

"It's a pretty big country," was Slade's altogether unsatisfactory reply.

"Not to a cloud-dodger who can go from here to Aklavik in fourteen hours," contended Cruger, who added, not without acerbity: "And keep his eyes open!"

Slade was willing to let that pass.

"Did you ever stop to think about motives," he asked, "in the swiping of that Lockheed?"

"I'm not a mind-reader," retorted the older man. "But I know this much: a crack-pot who'd high-jack a plane like that would always be ready to take chances in the air."

"He must have known how to fly."

Cruger's eye became meditative as it went up to the wall map.

"You mentioned the Avikaka," he said. "That's well on toward the Anawotto, isn't it?"

Slade acknowledged that it was.

"About as empty country as you've got on your run?"

"It's not on my run. But it's empty, all right. Mostly bird life and barrens. It's the district I dropped your swan-hunter in."

Cruger's gaze became reflective.

"Oh, yes; the swan-hunter. He told us he wanted to stay anchored there until after the freeze-up."

"And perhaps later," said Slade. "I saw him on my way south. All he seems to want just now is to be left alone."

"It just doesn't add up," said Cruger.

Slade tried to make his smile a casual one.

"How about me trying to make it add up?" he suggested. He had, as he stood there, been doing a bit of rough and ready mathematics of his own.

"What could you do?"

"After dropping my pay load at Conjuror's Bay," Slade suggested, "I might scout around where I felt it would do the most good. I mean, scout around in earnest."

Cruger's glance went up to the wall map again.

"The field's too big," he said, "no one man could fine-comb that territory. And in a couple of weeks we'd have you to look for."

"I'd take a chance on that," said the man with the Viking eyes.

"But you wouldn't even know what you were looking for."

"Don't be too sure of that," was the delusively casual reply. "I've a hunch or two I'd rather like to sound out."

"About what?"

"First, about that Anawotto country."

"This company can't operate on hunches," Cruger averred in a voice that was less friendly than his gaze.

"And that's a fine country to get lost in."

"I don't think I'd get lost," Slade said. "I know the lay-out there a little better than most bush hawks. And if I went in I'd go with camp equipment and extra fuel and rations."

"And grow whiskers and go native," observed Cruger, "and leave us with two planes out of service!"

Slade ignored the note of mockery.

"I usually get back," he announced.

Cruger's face lost its frown.

"You do," he acknowledged. "But a trip like that would mean two-way radio, to keep in touch with us."

"I wouldn't want radio," said Slade. "That would be spilling the beans to everyone between Edmon-ton and Point Barrow. What I'd rather have would be a belt ax and an air mattress, and perhaps a fish net. And a magazine rifle. And an extra mosquito bar. The flies are bad in that section these days."

"Sounds to me, Lindy, as though you wanted to follow up that looney-bird-lover and look for swans."

"No, I won't be looking for swans," said Slade. "It will be for something bigger than a trumpet-er."

Matter of Habit

The man who makes it the habit of his life to go to bed at nine o'clock, usually gets rich and is always reliable. Of course, going to bed does not make him rich—I merely mean that such a man will in all probability be up early in the morning and do a big day's work, so his weary bones put him to bed early.

Rogues do their work at night. Honest men work by day. It's all a matter of habit, and good habits in America make any man rich. Wealth is largely a result of habit.—John Jacob Astor.

NEW IDEAS

for Home-makers

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

EVERY kind of cotton goods from dainty chintz to bold plaid gingham is being used for bedspreads. Most of these materials are about 36 inches wide and you will need 11½ yards for a bed 54 inches wide. See diagrams for cutting dimensions.

Cut the center portions first; then the 18-inch side sections for the pillow cover; then the 10-inch strips for the pillow cover and spread. This leaves a 26-inch-wide strip for the side ruffles of the spread. If you make your own seam welting, cover cord with bias strips basted, as at A, and stitched with the cording foot, as at B.

NOTE: This bedspread is from BOOK 1 of the series of booklets which Mrs. Spears has prepared for our readers. This book also gives step-by-step directions for making slip covers, dressing table skirts and 12 different styles of curtains including a simple rigging for draw curtains. Treat Constipation This Gentler Way!

Many folks say that almost as bad as constipation are harsh cathartics and purges. That's because many medicinal laxatives work this way: they either prod the intestines into action or draw moisture into them from other parts of the body. Now comes news of a gentler and pleasanter way of treating constipation, for the millions of people with normal intestines whose trouble is due to lack of "bulk" in the diet. This way is by eating KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN, a crisp, delicious cereal, and drinking plenty of water. ALL-BRAN, unlike many medicinal laxatives, acts principally on the contents of the colon and helps you to have easy, normal elimination. ALL-BRAN is made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. If your condition is not helped by this simple treatment, better see your doctor.

The War isn't fought in Fox Holes alone

IT'S fought in the mind. It's fought with a will to win. It's fought with a belief in a cause worth dying for.

That will, that belief, is known as morale.

Our enemies have had years of indoctrination. They have been conditioned to believe themselves part of a "new order" . . . to which the contribution of their lives is small but all-important. They believe themselves cogs in a vast machine.

Our soldiers do not fight that way—because they do not live that way. Theirs is the belief in the sanctity of the individual.

To maintain their morale in the American way, the USO has devoted all its time and energy since practically the beginning of conscription.

It has done this by staffing and maintaining club houses near all training camps and in our outlying possessions from Alaska to the Caribbean.

Today its work is far greater than ever, its need for funds to carry on more than doubled.

The USO needs your help more than ever before!

High government and military officials—including General MacArthur—have praised the work done by the USO and recognized its importance in the war effort.

But it needs recognition from you—recognition in the way of dollars and cents. For the six national agencies which comprise the USO are publicly supported.

Now above all times, to make your dollars count, give to the USO!

Send your contribution to your local USO Committee or to National Headquarters, USO, Empire State Building, New York, N. Y.

Tinley Park News

Many of Tinley Park's most prominent residents will have the novel experience this week of receiving a check from the United Charities of Chicago sent to them by Edward D.
McDougal, Jr., Chicago attorney who is president of the welfare agency.

Although each check is made out for several dollars, its benefit to the recipient will be spiritual rather than financial for Mr. McDougal is asking each Tinley Park person who receives such a check to add his bank name and signature and return it to the United Charities.

As these checks come back, needy children from Chicago's crowded industrial sections will be transported to farms and camps. The agency is planning at present to provide such vacations to approximately 2000 mothers and children who need this special health program.

In the event that Chicago is in danger of attack, however, Joel D.
Hunter, general superintendent of the agency, reported that the program will be rapidly expanded to remove many more persons from industrial zones.

Richard Mason who enlisted in the Army Air Corps, left for ground mechanic training Thursday morning.
Raymond Mason Jr. has enlisted and

Dear Folks:

I received your package of cigarettes, razor blades, and handkerchiefs last week. Thanks a lot to you all. Also, I don't know whether or not I've ever told you how much it means to get the Times every week, sure seems good to see some familiar names in print for a change.

Hot summer weather has hit this Camp Polk vicinity right on schedule.
A year ago, June was the hottest month of the summer season here, and sure looks as though this June will be an equal to it.

A fellow sure welcomes the evenings when it does cool off a little bit.
We don't know how much longer we will go here. There's supposed to be an extensive maneuver plan to go into effect soon, and where this will take place or when this will take place is not known by any of us here.

If we did know we couldn't say anyway. I can't think of another thing that is news or would make interesting reading so will say so long and thanks again for the package.

Sincerely,

Sgt. Emory Fulton
Santa Ana Army Air Base,

Dear Miss Rogers:

I'm sitting down very promptly and writing this letter. I've just received the toilet kit, mirror, comb, case, and the cigarettes, too.

I say, that was really very unexpectedly kind of you and I certainly appreciate it. It's difficult to express how much and I wish that I could do something in return. Please let me know.

Very little happening around here outside of the usual routine. School is as interesting as might be expected, and we have the usual drill and athletics and study time. Something new has been added however, a promise of a pay day, in the near future.
First since arrival and hard to believe. Will wonders never cease?

Next weekend I hope to see the ocean for the first time. If nothing intervenes. Anything is possible, however, from guard duty to confinement to quarters. Never quite know what to expect from one day to the next, only usually nothing happens.

Well I'm sorry to say that outside of what would constitute military secrets, there's honestly nothing happening around here. So, best regards to everybody and Keep 'Em Flying.

Very sincerely,

Allan Boner
Fort Leonard Wood, Mo.

Dear Friend:

I got your letter and card. I really appreciate all the things you send me they are really nice and I use them a lot.

I get the Tinley Park Times and I really enjoy reading that and see what's going on around home. I am feeling good and I gained some weight. The weather is about 100 degrees. There isn't much news here.

Your friend Emil Wille
P.S. I am sending this picture. I would like to have it in the Tinley Times with my letter if you can do that.

Dear Friends:

Received your last package Friday containing cigarettes and handkerchiefs. Was very glad to get it as I was just about out of smokes. Thanks a million. Received the Tinley Park Times this noon. I thought you had forgotten to send me last weeks paper, didn't get it till Tuesday noon.

When one gets that paper for a while and then it don't come you sure do miss it. I'd like to tell you some of the things we are doing here but I can't as everything is considered military information. Can't tell you what kind of weather we're having down here.

I am still the same as ever. Still barracks janitor. Well I guess I'll close saying so-long.

Members of the Citizen's Club:
We arrived here this morning at 7 o'clock had a swell trip. We came thru Colo. Most of the mountains had snow on them. There were about 16 boys from our Sqd., that came here from Sheppard Field. There are 10 of us on one ship to crew it.

The weather is nice here. We are 4250 feet above sea level. This field is also a new one, just like Sheppard Field only five months old.

The town of Wendover has only 165 people. We are 135 miles from Salt Lake City. We can get weekend passes to go there. Would you please send me the Tinley Times, I enjoy reading it.

It is getting late so I will close,
As ever,
Ervin.

address.

First we will go to some factory and then out on the line. Thanks a lot for sending the Times each week I enjoy it very much. The weather is getting hot down here. But the nights are cool. I saw on the back of the package Dr. Maxwell's name, so hello Dr. How is every little thing in Tinley.

I would like to say hello to all my friends in Tinley Park and hope they are fine. There isn't much news around here so I will close for now.

Will write as soon as I find out my Citizens Committee of T. P.

Dear Friends:

I'm afraid you'll find my letters a bit far apart folks. Now that the great offensive season has begun and action is becoming fast and furious almost all of one's time must be accounted for.

Speaking of sea warfare, how do you like your Navy now? Midwest-erners have such little contact with naval life that it all seems a bit re-note. What?

We're all a flock of rarin tarin Jap haters too. It seems that ever since Dai Nippan became a sea power there would someday come a time of reckoning.

It is here. The instinctive mutual dislike has finally broken loose in a struggle both navies have long anticipated and prepared for. Japan shan't have the chance to scuttle her fleet as the Germans did after the first world war. We shall personally see that every enemy craft afloat down to the last sampan will receive our toast, "Bottoms Up."

Then by George we'll open the sea cocks of the Jap isles and sink them too. Even though the struggle has just begun, one often tries to stop one's furious activities for a moment to picture the post war world.

I see two roads ahead and we are near the fork where they separate and vanish far into the future. One road is thus: Will it be a case of the victors quarreling among themselves over the territorial spoils of war? Power politics & international hoodwinking? These are the seeds of another great war.

Or will the people of the victorious United nations exert their mass will power over the leader of our countries who themselves, men of great wisdom, may be replaced by sweet tongued, greedy eyed politicians who picture the prostrate nations victors and vanquished alike, as treasure houses awaiting the breaking down of doors. We the people must maintain control over our powers of discretion and place men the like of Lincoln to represent our nations at conference tables of final reckoning.
Do we imagine England demanding Hong Kong be returned by China when it's all over Or another international settlement at Shanghai?

Do we feel that Russia should continue the acception of Poland and the Baltic countries when hostilities have ceased? I'm sure the people of China and Poland and the Baltic nations who now wander among the ruins of their battle shattered homes, praying and fighting fiercely against what, according to military logistics, are hopeless odds, do not intend to allow any other to prevent their standing along side us with their battle flags high in the sky.

Let us all be filled with the spirit of battle now and gnash our teeth with rage at the enemy, threatening to sink their very land and desolate their nations. Truly this spirit will fill the heart of every Mussolito with violent apprehensions as to the wisdom of continuing the fracas.

Let all this be so, but back in our minds we shall remember that we the freedom loving people of this earth, must keep the reins of power tight in our hands and destroy the maker of wars, Oppression of people. Be sure of this; another war will find its fields of battle even on the site of Tinley Park who wish us so well. The "Times" is also gratefully welcomed and scanned closely for news of those I know so well.

May I also mention my receipt of a fine letter from Rev. Weinreich. He is an inspiration to a great cause. I look forward to meeting him in person some day. Time of the writing of this missive finds me in the best of health and spirits and enjoying the natural beauty of Hawaii very much.
I'm getting to be quite a native you know.

Aloha to Everyone,
John Andrew Lahti

War Production and Electric Power in Northern Illinois

Implements of war for land, sea and air are rolling from assembly lines of factories that not long ago were producing peace-time needs, or did not even exist. Electric power not only helped to speed the conversion of plant facilities and the building of new plants, but is now making it possible for industry to meet and surpass production goals.

Supplying electric power for war production in the Northern Illinois area we serve is our first duty.

for their annual ride and as the skies cleared they took to the woods and trails, past sloughs where muskrats peered from their mud banked dens. After a brisk ride over a 13-mile route they returned to the log-cabin clearing and were tempted to dismount by the fragrance of bacon sizzling over a charcoal fire. Fluffy scrambled eggs, fried potatoes browned in butter, steins of beer, black and hot coffee made up the breakfast fare. In another section of the forest preserve about 75 stout-booted lads and lassies of the Port Dearborn Hikers' Club plodded up hill and down dale in a five-mile jaunt. Some of the Palos people attending the ride were: Mr. and Mrs. Guy Rivers, Mr. and Mrs. Jacobson, Dr. and Mrs. Jerry Vlk, Mr. Hayes Treadway and daughter Phyllis and Robert Mann, superintendent of maintenance for the preserves. "City of Grand Rapids" Starts Summer Cruises Saturday, June 20th Starting June 20 the steamer will operate from Chicago to Benton Harbor and St. Joe, Michigan, daily, leaving Chicago at 9:45 a.m. arriving at Benton Harbor and St. Joe at 1:45 p.m. with three hours stopover to visit Michigan's bathing beaches and resorts, leaving Benton Harbor and St. Joe at 4:45 p.m., arriving at Chicago 8:45 p.m. It will be Chicago's only lake excursion boat this season.

The boat will offer also moonlight cruises leaving Navy Pier every evening starting Saturday June 20, at 9:30 p.m. returning at midnight.

George Marshall and his orchestra has been engaged for the season. The City of Grand Rapids is especially adapted for excursions across the lake, as she has a beautiful ballroom dining room, two cocktail bars, and the Lido Sun Deck. There are also sleeping accommodations for 400 persons.

McGuire said the City of Grand Rapids would be manned by virtually the same crew as in the past, including Captain O. C. Bjork of Benton Harbor who will be the master. The ship is now moored at Benton Harbor where she is being repainted and redecorated throughout.

The company aims to encourage across the lake travel both for passenger and ferry service, carrying trucks. According to the statement made by McGuire, it is planned that the Cleveland and Buffalo Transit Company's future program will be to include a ferry service across the lake, as soon as equipment is available. The Cleveland and Buffalo Transit Company's S. S. Seelandbee which was the largest cruise ship on the Great Lakes, was recently requisitioned by the United States navy to be rebuilt and used as an airplane carrier for training purposes.

ORLAND PARK

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of our dear Husband and Daddy, who passed away two years ago June 24, 1940.

Often we pause and think of you, And think of how you died;

To think you could not say Goodbye Before you closed your eyes.

No one knows the silent heartaches, Only those who have loved can tell Of the grief that is born in silence

For our dear Daddy we loved so well

Loving wife ELSIE and sons VAN EARL, EUGENE and MARTIN. Orland Park, Ill.

The Concert given by the Fether family at the Orland Park school gym last Thursday evening under the sponsorship of the Adult Bible Class of the Methodist church was well attended in spite of the rain, proved to be a unique and worth while entertainment.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Vogt celebrated their silver wedding anniversary at their home Wednesday evening, June 10. An elaborate dinner was served to about 50 relatives and friends who came to extend their congratulations and best wishes to the fortunate couple. Many beautiful and useful gifts were presented. A re-affirmation of their wedding ceremony was conducted by Mr. S S Knox who was Master of Ceremonies and told the assembled guests all about the courtship days of Ernest and Violet. Mr. and Mrs. Vogt proved to be admirable hosts and everyone had a most enjoyable evening.

During the course of the evening Gus Zerbs called from his army camp in Texas to congratulate Mr. and Mrs. Vogt. Gus is Mr. Vogt's nephew.

Monday, June 8 the ladies of the Buncos club staged a surprise party on the Vogts in honor of their anniversary. Buncos was played and refreshments served. The following ladies were present: Mesdames Reish, Heiting, Knox, Keuch, Jacobson, Hallinan, Oelke, Zerbs, Uthe, Rauch, W. Nicolai, H. Nicolai and C. Nicolai.

Some time ago, the Childrens Flower Mission of Cleveland, Ohio which is seeking to encourage the love, appreciation and propagation of flowers among the children of the land, offered an award for the best Victory garden planted and cared for by the children of our schools. There were about 8 children of Orland Park school who participated in the local contest and it necessitated several inspections by the judges to determine the best among these. First place was finally awarded to Lillian Ada Knox, 11 years old, a pupil of the sixth grade who was presented with the Floyd Bradley Horticultural Achievement Medal. Honorable mention went to the gardens of Harold Rogers and Cornelia VanderMayden.

Last Wednesday a delegation from the Orland Park Methodist church consisting of Rev. and Mrs. H. L. Brett, and Mesdames Minnie Davidson, Lydia Cooper, Clara Myrick, Olive Loebe, Mollie Reish and Lillian Knox visited Marcy Center, at 16th and Springfield Ave., Chicago. This institution is one of the home missionary projects supported by the Methodist churches of the Rock River Conference district whose people have need for guidance in living, encouragement in difficulties and counsel in spiritual life. Particularly interesting is the work being done at this institution among the number of refugee Jews who are congregated in this district.

At the meeting of Orland Park Post of the American Legion held last Tues., there was such a small turnout that only routine business was transacted. A donation was made to the USO fund which is being collected under the direction of Mrs. H. Adelle Cooper. The time is drawing near for the annual Legion picnic and it is the request of Commander Geo. Cox that every Orland Legionnaire make a special effort to be present at the meeting of June 23 in order that something definite may be decided on about the picnic.

Several persons have commented on the fact that the National Colors have not been flown from the Legion flag pole. The pulley at the top of the pole is out of order and has cut the halyards and up to date, the Legion has been unable to secure anyone who will climb the pole and install a new pulley and halyard. The Legion is offering a substantial sum to anyone who will do this and anyone who cares to take on the job should contact Commander Geo. Cox.

The RNA Juveniles will meet Monday, June 22 at 2 pm at the home of their director, Mrs. Christina Rust, instead of Wednesday, June 24 as originally scheduled. The Juvenile picnic held last Thursday in the Forest Preserve Grove on 143rd Street was an enjoyable affair in spite of the rain. The picknickers had just finished dinner when it started so the entire party was moved over to the Ray Doctor garage where buncos was played; prizes awarded and ice cream donated by the Royal Neighbors was consumed. Everybody had a good time and their motto seemed to be that "it takes more than a little rain to spoil a good time when regular feller's get together".

The WSCS will meet for an all day session Thursday, June 25 in the church basement. A potluck dinner will be served at noon.

At the Legion meeting the sum of $15.00 was authorized to be paid out of the Scout fund to help defray expenses of 5 of our Boy Scout Troop on their summer outing at the Scout Camp in Michigan.

Fortyone persons who have been attending the Red Cross First Aid Class which has been conducted in the Orland Park school for the past 10 weeks under the instruction of Mr. Ralph Town have successfully passed their examinations and have received their Red Cross First Aid proficiency certificates. Several others completed most of the course but did not take the examinations. So much interest has been taken in the work by members of the class that there has been a request for an advanced course in which the knowledge gained from the lectures may be worked out in practical problems in the class. Mr. Town states that his time will be taken up until July 15 but after that time if 10 or more register for it, a class on advanced work will be formed. This course can be completed in 10 hours or about 3 evenings.

At the close of the last session, the members of the class presented Mr. Town with a Gladstone Bag as a token of esteem and appreciation for his excellent work as instructor. Mr. Town wishes to thank his class for their fine cooperation and the members of the class, and the community as well, owe a debt of appreciation to Mr. Town for his able and painstaking instruction.

The following have successfully passed their examinations: Mrs. Agnes Anderson, John Betts, Mrs. Theodora Betts, Ana May Butler, Mrs. Josephine Braash, Mrs. Alfretha Burkhardt, Clarence Creer, Mrs. James Creer, Ruth Davidson, Olin Ellwood, Mariam Emanuelson, Richardson Farr, Verna Farr, Edna Hewson, Clifford Horn, Irene Hughes.

Toman Over the Top In Collections

County Treasurer John Toman has gone over the top again in the collection of real estate and personal property. For the third consecutive year, he has set a new record in tax payments. Last year, with the close of payments on the first installment of taxes, his collections amounted to $100,299,000. This year with some 12,000 bills that were received prior to May 1, the deadline, still to be tabulated, his collections have already reached $104,658,272.

Not since the collections of 1927 when everybody had money and every body paid their bills, has there been such a collection as Mr. Toman reports today. When all of the bills are tabulated, it is Mr. Toman's belief that his record of collections will be $8,000,000 over those of a year ago.

Outstanding lawyers, real estate men, businessmen and real estate boards have declared, but for the fact that a treasurer cannot succeed himself, they would have urged the drafting of Mr. Toman for a second term. Taxpayers should look with pride and pleasure to Mr. Toman's next step, that of Member of the Board of Tax Appeals.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"God the Preserver of Man" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, June 14.

The Golden Text was, "The Lord is our defence; and the Holy One of Israel is our king" (Psalms 89: 18).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "Therefore take no thought, saying, What shall we eat? or, What shall we drink? or, Wherewithal shall we be clothed? But seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you" (Matt. 6: 31, 33).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker E

Household News

Fruit Plate Enhances the Bride's First Dinner
(See Recipes Below.)

Cooking for Two

Now that the honeymoon is over, the serious business of housekeeping begins. Most brides manage well with the general cleaning routines, but marketing and cooking presents some problems.

No bride need feel alarmed, however, about cooking or marketing for two, for it is often just as much of a problem to market and feed two people as it is a dozen. To help out this year's bride, I've formulated a few rules by which she can start guiding her culinary adventures.

First, the marketing. How, exactly does one use the food dollar? It's done by fifths: one-fifth of the money should go for purchasing fruits and vegetables; the next fifth for milk and cheese, and the bride should remember to provide a pint of milk for her brand new husband and herself, every day, in drinking or cooking. Another fifth goes for meat, eggs and fish, and still another fifth provides the bread and cereals. The last fifth is used for purchasing fats like butter or enriched margarine, sugars and accessories.

The above yardstick will help the bride plan her well-balanced meals. Purchasing fruits, vegetables, milk, butter and cheese will be simple if she follows the guide.

The wise bride will buy carefully, planning menus in advance so there will be no waste and all leftovers will be used in menus.

Before she markets, she makes a list, looks through the advertisements to decide where she can get the most for her money. After making sure her list is complete, she goes to the grocers to do her buying. In this way she does not have to make too many trips and she can save her own time and that of her grocer. She knows there is a premium on time in wartime.

The bride also depletes waste, especially in buying meats. To aid her in making out the meat list for two, I have made out the following:

- Beef:
- 2 club steaks
 - 2 cube steaks
 - 1 T-Bone steak
 - 2 rib steaks
 - 1 pound round steak (for swiss steak)
 - 2 pounds pot roast
 - 1 flank steak (for stuffing)
 - 1 pound ground beef (for loaf)
 - ½ pound ground beef (for patties and casseroles)
 - ½ pound liver
 - 4 large frankfurters

- Pork:
- 2 chops (butterfly, loin or shoulder)
 - 1½ pounds spareribs
 - 4 to 6 slices thin Canadian bacon
 - ¾ pound ham slice
 - 2 pounds fresh loin roast
 - 2 pounds smoked butt (boned)
 - ½ pound bulk sausage or links
 - ¾ pound bacon
 - ¾ pound tenderloin

- Veal:
- 2 pounds rolled rump roast
 - 2 loin chops

Lynn Says:

Here are the rules by which to substitute honey and corn syrup for sugar in your recipes.

In using honey, substitute ¾ to 1 cup of honey for each cup of granulated sugar, but reduce the liquid in the recipe ¼ cup for each cup of honey used.

In using corn syrup, substitute 2 cups of corn syrup for each cup of granulated sugar. Reduce the liquid in the recipe by one-fourth.

If you wish to substitute corn syrup for only part of the sugar you may substitute 1 cup of corn syrup for each ½ cup of sugar and reduce your liquid one-eighth.

Because of the difference in flavors of substitute products, be prepared to have a slight change of flavor in the food you prepare with them.

Honey cakes and cookies, if allowed to ripen, will have better flavor.

Bride's First Dinner

*Swedish Meat Loaf

*Asparagus Parsleyed Potatoes

Whole Wheat Bread and Butter

*Fruit Plate

Cookies Beverage
*Recipe Given

- ½ to ¾ pound steaks or cutlets
- 2 rib or kidney chops
- 1 sirloin steak
- 1½ pounds riblets
- 1 pound breast or neck meat for stews
- ½ pound liver

- Lamb:
- 2 shoulder, loin, or rib chops
 - 2 lamb patties
 - 2½ pounds shoulder roast
 - Small leg roast
 - 2 lamb shanks
 - 1½ pounds riblets
 - ½ pounds cut up lamb for curry or casserole

Poultry:

One broiler usually serves two people. It is very often possible to buy certain pieces of fowl, especially chicken, and you can decide how much of each piece according to your appetite. For frying, a 3-pound chicken is just about right.

A simple dish for one of the bride's first dinners is this Swedish meat loaf. It's simple as first grade spelling to make, and certain to please the brand new husband. If there is some leftover, the loaf is very delicious served cold in sandwiches or sliced with potato salad:

*Swedish Meat Loaf.

(Serves 2)

- ¾ cup twice-ground beef
 - ¼ cup twice-ground pork
 - ¼ cup grated potato
 - 1 tablespoon grated onion
 - 3 tablespoons milk
 - Salt and pepper
- Mix meat thoroughly, add onion, potato, milk and salt and pepper. Blend thoroughly, and shape into loaf. Place in a buttered loaf pan and bake ¾ of an hour in a moderate (350-degree) oven. Baste at 15-minute intervals. To make gravy (after loaf has baked) take 2 tablespoons of the drippings, blend with 2 tablespoons flour, ½ teaspoon salt, a few grains of pepper, and then mix in slowly 1 cup of milk.

Asparagus.

Take ¾ of a pound of asparagus, clean, add 2½ cups boiling water with ¾ teaspoon salt. Boil uncovered, 15 minutes, drain, and serve with melted butter.

Fruit Plate.

Make a circle of orange slices on a large individual platter. In the center of the wreath, place a lettuce cup, fill with avocado balls, a devilled egg and watercress.

Use halved strawberries for one fruit mound at the side of the plate, raspberries and blackberries for the second berry patch, with a cluster of cherries for further variety.

Select easy-to-peel Valencia oranges for slicing purposes.

Bride's Biscuits are exquisitely simple to make if you use this recipe:

Bride's Biscuits.

(Makes 18 Biscuits)

- 2 cups enriched, sifted flour
- 3 teaspoons baking powder
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 2 to 4 tablespoons shortening
- ¾ to 1 cup milk
- 2 tablespoons softened butter or margarine

Sift dry ingredients together, cut in shortening. Add milk to form a soft mixture. Turn on lightly floured board and knead ½ minute. Pat out to ½ inch thickness. Spread with 1 tablespoon butter. Fold over and spread top with remaining butter. Cut with a 2-inch cutter. Bake on a baking sheet in a hot (450-degree) oven 10 to 12 minutes.

THE TASK COMMITTED TO THE DISCIPLES

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 28:16-20; Mark 16:14-20; Luke 24:49-53.
GOLDEN TEXT—Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature.—Mark 16:15.

Witnesses of the resurrection—that privilege of the disciples carried with it the responsibility of declaring the good news of completed redemption to all the nations of the earth. In doing so they were destined to meet opposition and unbelief, to feel weariness and to know discouragement. So the Lord, before leaving this world for His present ministry at the Father's right hand (Mark 16:19; Heb. 7:25), prepared them by giving them a divine commission, which they accepted and acted upon with the assurance of His power and blessing. The lesson is summarized in the words, "Go ye" (Matt. 28:19); "They went forth" (Mark 16:20); "And He . . . blessed them" (Luke 24:50).

I. "Go Ye" (Matt. 28:16-20).

God's plans are never small plans. World evangelization, nothing less, was the goal He had in mind, and to which Christ commissioned this little group of humble folk who were His disciples. It was not only a great commission, but a daring one.

Back of such marching orders there must be authority and power—and Christ had them (v. 18)—all power and all authority. No need to measure or compare, for His is the ultimate and complete authority. This is the One who said, "Come unto me"; then, "Follow me, and I will make you fishers of men," and who now says, "Go." If we heed one command, should we not absolutely obey the others?

The message is His message, the gospel (Mark 16:15). It is the only message! The witnesses of Christ are not called to educate and civilize the heathen without winning them to Christ. To do so is only to prepare stronger and more skillful enemies of all that we count holy.

But a great program means nothing if it is not carried out; a great commission is only words unless it is accepted and obeyed. We read of the disciples that—

II. "They Went Forth" (Mark 16:14-20).

The call and command are given in this passage. The power is made clear and somewhat in detail, but the significant thing is that they actually went forth to preach.

The response of these early Christians was immediate and enthusiastic. Would that such a spirit had characterized the church through all the generations since then, for if it had, the commission would long since have been carried out. Dr. R. A. Torrey has estimated that if everyone in a church of 2,000 were to win one soul a year, and each convert win one soul each year, the world would be evangelized in less than 35 years.

But while on the whole the church has failed, there have been valiant souls all down through its history who have given themselves to the business of soul-winning. With them, as with these of the first century, the secret is ever "The Lord working with them." We read that as He was leaving this earth and His disciples, He lifted up His hands—

III. "And He . . . Blessed Them" (Luke 24:49-53).

God has always honored those who in faith have obeyed His command. The whole history of missionary endeavor bears eloquent testimony to that fact.

Sometimes we marvel at the success of a great movement, such as that founded by John Wesley. The answer is that God found a man, or a little group of men or women, willing to take Him at His word and step out in earnest purpose to obey Him. "For forty years John Wesley carried on his mission of canvassing for Christ 'as a parliamentary candidate canvasses for votes in his constituency in the strenuous three weeks before an election'" (Arnold's Commentary). Little wonder that with the blessing of Christ upon his work brings joy to many even to this day.

Note that the disciples who had been made sad and despondent by their parting with Christ at Calvary now went away in joy. The joy of the Lord is the strength of the Christian worker. It gives him abundant grace and power in the hour of need and makes him a fruitful servant.

A Warm Soul

I saw once lying side by side in a great workshop, two heads made of metal. The one was perfect; all the features of a noble, manly face came out clear and distinct in their lines of strength and beauty; in the other, scarcely a single feature could be recognized; it was all marred and spoiled. "The metal had been let grow a little too cool, sir," said the man who was showing it to me. I could not help thinking how true that was of many a form more precious than metal. — Canon Teignmouth Shore.

Buttoned Bodice.

ISN'T it a treat—to find a dress of such smart appearance which is at the same time, original and different in its treatment? The single button bodice is the trick which distinguishes this model from all others. The silhouette, too, is gracefully slimming and the front panel achieves a skirt slenderness which you will find is very flattering. Make this dress in rayon crepes or lovely cotton prints.

Pattern No. 8129 is in sizes 32 to 46. Size 34, short sleeves, takes 4½ yards 35-inch material.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Galoshes should be stuffed with paper and wrapped separately when storing. The idea is to keep the rubber surfaces from touching as summer's heat will vulcanize rubber.

Empty fruit jars should be perfectly dry inside and out before storing. Mold may grow in a jar with moisture inside.

Chromium plate is a soft metal. To clean simply wipe with a damp cloth.

Copper and brass utensils are dangerous to use if not kept perfectly clean. Rub spot with hot vinegar and salt, lemon rind and salt, tomato juice, rhubarb juice or hot sour milk.

To "soft cook" eggs properly, immerse in boiling water. Cover and let stand on the hot burner or on the back of the range two minutes. The egg white will be jelly-like and the yolk soft, making a digestible and palatable food.

To save shopping trips

Buy more oranges at a time—they keep

You don't have to cut down on fresh foods just because you shop less often these days. Simply buy oranges in larger amounts. They're naturally good keepers!

They give you protective vitamins and minerals you need, especially vitamin C. They satisfy your sweet tooth—save sugar.

If you're concerned about what sort of gift to send a friend or relative in one of Uncle Sam's branches of the services, your worries are over. If he smokes a pipe or rolls his own, the answer is a pound of tobacco. Numerous surveys made among soldiers, sailors, marines, and Coast Guardsmen show that tobacco ranks first on his gift list. Local tobacco dealers are featuring Prince Albert in the pound can for service men. Prince Albert, the world's largest-selling smoking tobacco, is a big favorite among many men in the service. —Adv.

Somehow Tramp Knew He Wasn't Addressing George

A tramp, coming down a country road in England, stopped a moment in meditation before a sign on which was written: "George and the Dragon." He then entered the tavern to which the sign was affixed and asked for the landlady.

"Noble lady," he began, "have you a meal and some old clothes to spare for a poor, tired and hungry man?"

"Not for the likes of you. Now go!" she said sternly. Then, seeing he desired to get another word with her, "Well?"

"Then please, ma'am, could I speak to George?"

Sentinels of Health

Don't Neglect Them!

Nature designed the kidneys to do a marvelous job. Their task is to keep the flowing blood stream free of an excess of toxic impurities. The act of living—life itself—is constantly producing waste matter the kidneys must remove from the blood if good health is to endure. When the kidneys fail to function as Nature intended, there is retention of waste that may cause body-wide distress. One may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel tired, nervous, all worn out.

Frequent, scanty or burning passages are sometimes further evidence of kidney or bladder disturbance. The recognized and proper treatment is a diuretic medicine to help the kidneys get rid of excess poisonous body waste. Use Doan's Pills. They have had more than forty years of public approval. Are endorsed the country over. Insist on Doan's. Sold at all drug stores.
